

INTERIOR DESIGN

College of Architecture, Art and Design

Interior design operates between architecture and interior decoration. The interior designer must be competent to operate in both professions with an intimate knowledge of materials selection, construction methods and furnishings as well as technical skills and construction expertise. Interior designers make creative use of interior architecture and lighting. They research and analyze the needs and wants of a client, prepare and create design ideas and organize drawings and blueprints. By working with architects and contractors, interior designers supervise the execution of the design.
